Professional Profile

Stacey's practice focuses on intellectual property, professional liability, business litigation and other complex commercial litigation. She joined Berkowitz Oliver in 2003 from Latham & Watkins' Los Angeles office, where she was a member of that firm's Litigation Department. Through the course of her practice at both firms, she has successfully handled numerous complex and high-profile disputes, including trademark, copyright, patent, advertising, unfair competition, right of publicity, fraud, contract, tort, insurance, consumer and class action matters. Stacey represents clients in a full range of litigation matters, such as civil lawsuits, arbitration, mediation and dispute resolution proceedings, as well as regulatory and investigatory matters. Her depth and breadth of experience is evident from the range and significance of matters she has been retained to handle, including, for example, her current and recent representations of:

- A Fortune 500 company in Lanham Act litigation concerning a national ad campaign by one of client's largest competitors,
- A multi-national company in ongoing strategic monitoring, counseling and litigation matters regarding trademark and advertising issues, as well as WIPO domain name arbitrations;
- The owner of multiple U.S. and international patents in a dispute regarding theft and infringement of the client's inventions by one of the world's largest consumer goods companies;
- Automobile manufacturers in connection with various trademark, advertising and consumer protection lawsuits and disputes;
- A global family of insurance companies in Federal and State court lawsuits ranging from coverage to tort, contract and complex business actions;
- A publicly-traded company with multi-billion dollar annual sales in class action antitrust litigation;
- "Big Four" accounting firms, CPAs, tax professionals and other financial service-providers in numerous disputes ranging from multi-million dollar contract and tort claims to professional liability arbitrations; and
- National broker/dealers, financial advisors and individual brokers in sales practice arbitrations, lawsuits and regulatory matters.
